

Daily report from March 3rd

On Tuesday, March 3rd, we all met at the school IES El Rincón in Las Palmas de Gran Canaria. When the bus driver picked us up at about 9 am, we finally started our trip. Our first stop was in the mountains at a cave restaurant. Before going there, we walked along a small trail in the mountains. It was a bit colder and it rained a little, but that didn't stop us from exploring the plant life of Gran Canaria.

Our Spanish teacher explained a lot about the landscape and the history of this place. At the end, we had a small hot chocolate in the cave restaurant.

After that, we continued our trip to a mountain that has a very fascinating history because it was very important for the indigenous people of Gran Canaria. We went for another walk there, took photos, and learned a lot about the history of the island's ancestors.

Our last well-known stop was Maspalomas, where we visited the beach and the dunes. The beach was very beautiful, and luckily the sun came out. The water was wonderful as well. When we kept walking, we reached the dunes. It was really impressive. The sand was great, and it was a lot of fun running down and climbing back up the dunes.

At the end of the trip, we ate some ice cream nearby. Then the bus driver picked us up again and brought us back to the school, where our exchange partners were already waiting for us.

It was already a bit late, so we went out without the teachers and ate some very delicious churros to finish the day.
